Ethan is one of only twenty young musicians to receive From the Top's Jack Kent Cooke Young Artist Award in the 2018–2019 season. The Young Artist Award helps young musicians with the high costs of studying classical music. Recipients must demonstrate exceptional musical ability, quality of character, and financial need. Since 2005, From the Top and the Jack Kent Cooke Foundation have awarded more than $2.4 million in scholarships to young musicians from across the United States.

Ethan is a ninth grade student from Charlton, Massachusetts. He is a student at Juilliard's Pre-College division studying violin with Joel Smirnoff and Naoko Tanaka, as well as composition with Eric Ewazen. Ethan has participated and placed in many competitions, most recently he was a finalist in ASCAP's Morton Gould Young Composers Awards, MTNA's Junior Composer Awards and won first prize at the American Protégé Concerto Competition. Since his first year of playing violin, Ethan has been a member of the Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra. He has been a concertmaster of the senior orchestra for the past three years, is a scholarship recipient, member of their honors chamber music program, was awarded the George Keches Award in 2018, and toured to Bachfest in Leipzig, Germany. In his spare time, Ethan brings music to retirement homes and raises money for community members in need. He likes to study cognitive linguistics, genealogy, and fencing.

On the From the Top broadcast, Ethan performs Sonatensatz in C Minor by Johannes Brahms, with Peter Dugan, piano.
