Led by arranger and pianist Scott Bradley, the critically acclaimed L.A.-based troupe of rotating musicians known as 'Postmodern Jukebox' – or simply "PMJ" by their 3.4 million YouTube subscribers -- will make a one night appearance in the intimate cabaret setting of UConn's Jorgensen Center for the Performing Arts on Friday, November 9. Described as "pop music in a time machine," this multi-talented collective reimagines contemporary chart-topping pop, rock, and R&B hits in the musical styles of various yesteryears; from '20s jazz and '30s swing to '50s doo wop and '60s Motown. Cabaret fare and dessert will be available from a cash bar when doors open at 7 pm. Concert begins at 8:00 pm.

For additional information about the artists visit www.postmodernjukebox.com.

Voted Best College or University Performing Arts Center in the Hartford Courant's CTNow, Jorgensen presents 30 to 40 diverse performances each season, from nationally and internationally acclaimed artists and ensembles ranging from classical music to world music and dance, classical ballet and contemporary dance, comedy, family programming and contemporary entertainment.

Jorgensen Center for the Performing Arts is located at 2132 Hillside Road on the UConn campus in Storrs. Tickets are now available online: $20 - $45.
